Dixiecrats Taking Rights Fight Direct To Floor Of Convention

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—Southerners carried their fight against President Truman's civil rights program to the full Democratic resolutions committee today after meeting defeat by the Northern "liberals."

The bitter dispute, which threatens to split the Democratic Party in two, was heightened by the action of the 18-member drafting subcommittee.

This group rejected the Southerners' plea for a states' rights plank in the Democratic platform and then strengthened the provision pledging a fight against Negro discrimination.

The South was defeated by a vote of 10 to 7 on a plank earlier approved by a special blue-ribbon, seven-member subcommittee calling for federal adherence to the rights of states to administer their own affairs.

This blow was followed by a 10 to 4 vote in which the civil rights plank adopted by the seven-member group was strengthened.

Instead of the 1944 convention plank, which proved acceptable four years ago to the Dixie representatives, the 18-member subcommittee reportedly took a stand for anti-poll tax, anti-lynching, anti-discrimination and fair employment legislation.

As a concession to the South, however, these key points in the President's civil rights program were not mentioned specifically by name.

The 1944 plank merely stated that "we believe that racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our Constitution."

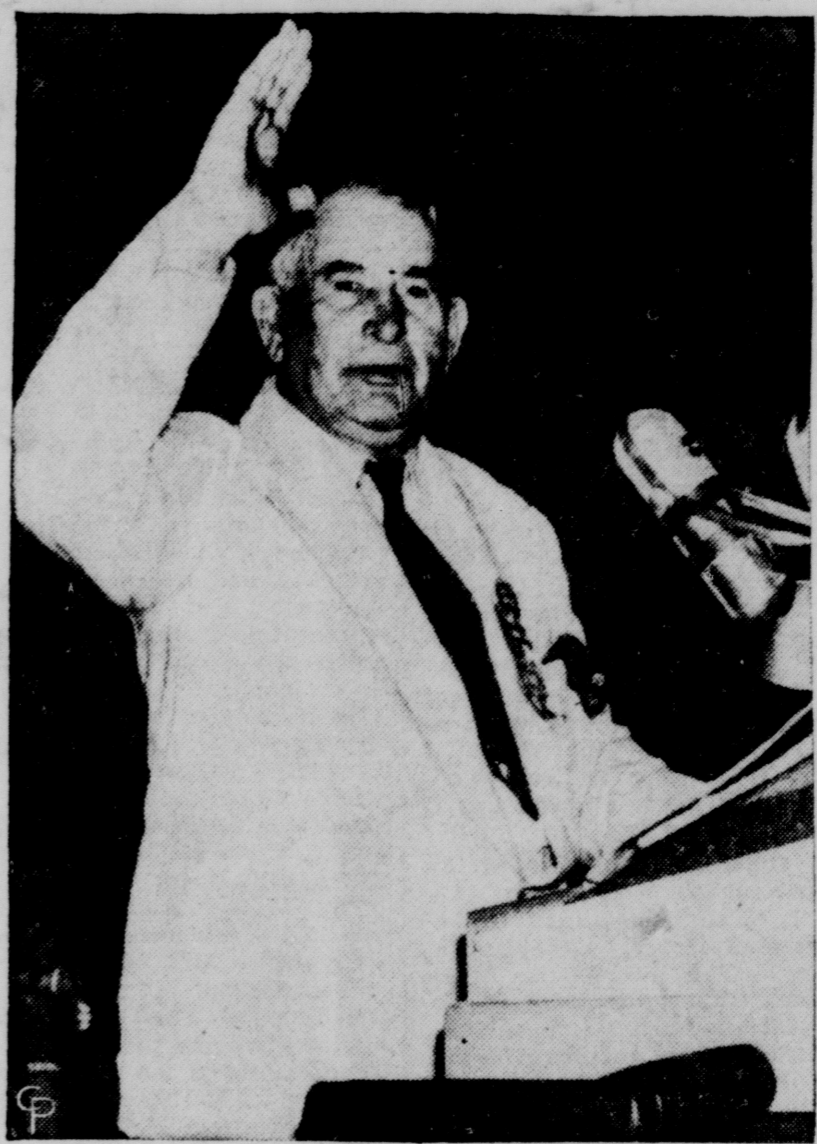

The subcommittee completed its work this morning after a gruelling, non-stop 12-hour session in an apartment in a mid-city residential hotel.

Sen. Francis Myers of Pennsylvania, who headed the group, said the completed draft will go to the convention, perhaps tonight but more probably tomorrow.

Myers refused to divulge the text of the platform or pertinent details until after the resolutions committee acts.

Rebels Due To Form '4th Party'

12 Dixie Groups Plan Own Parley

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—While a "fourth party" was in the making at the Democratic Party's convention here, it was apparent that Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky would be President Truman's running-mate in the November elections.

The 70-year-old Kentuckian had not officially accepted the bid as of noon today, but it was assumed he would not hesitate since his name has the blessing of Mr. Truman.

The "fourth party" angle developed as the Dixie revolt against the shoo-in Truman nomination gained greater momentum.

Twelve Southern delegations are in serious rebellion against the Truman civil rights program. Nine of them will fight the President's nomination to the bitter end, with many of their members walking out of the convention after Mr. Truman is nominated for another four years in the White House. The nomination is due tomorrow night.

Barkley scored a major hit as the convention "keynote" and won a 27-minute ovation last night.

FRANK HAGUE, powerful Jersey leader indicated his belief that Barkley will be nominated when he told reporters: "What the hell—you're not stupid—you saw that demonstration didn't you?"

Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, has refused to concede defeat. His manager claimed he had 200 votes in the west and is gaining strength.

Lewis To Ask Court Ignore NLRB Injunction

WASHINGTON, July 13—John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers union will ask a federal district court today to withhold an injunction against the eight-day-old "captive" coal mine strike.

The union is scheduled to file an answer to the petition of Robert N. Denham, general counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, for a court order to end the walkout of 40,000 miners in steel company-owned pits.

Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough will hear oral arguments on the case tomorrow.

The possibility remained of another meeting between union and company representatives to try for an 11th-hour compromise on the controversial union shop issue which provoked the strike.

"BIG STEEL" refused to sign the 1948 contract accepted by commercial mine operators on grounds that its union shop provision (Continued on Page Two)

Allies Plan 'Heavier Air Shuttle'

Berlin Lifeline Being Expanded

BERLIN, July 13—The United States and Britain disclosed plans today for a further stepping-up of the Western Allies' aerial supply shuttle to Berlin in defiance of Russia's continued economic blockade.

After it was revealed that the American Air Force is improving Tempelhof air-drome to receive more planes daily, British Air Minister Sir Arthur Henderson announced that the British are ready for an all-out attempt to fly coal into Berlin.

The needs are estimated at 2,000 tons of coal daily.

The air minister said: "All aerial transport possibilities will be studied, including the use of gliders."

Sir Arthur hedged on the question of whether the British are planning any aerial reinforcement of their troops now in Berlin.

He said merely:

"PLANES will be used to supply food and coal to the German population."

The joint American and British steps to increase aerial deliveries followed a new Russian order further restricting Berlin travel. The Soviets cancelled all German automobile passes from (Continued on Page Two)

Canning Peaches Bring $6.29 Bu.

Home economists were scratching their heads this week wondering how to can peaches economically with the price almost doubled over last year and with peach production only 50 to 60 percent of normal.

Peaches from the Georgia section will cost Circleville consumers about $6.29 a bushel. However, the reduced crop is expected to result in higher quality of product.

Experts say this all adds up to no low price canning peaches this year. Overall peach crops, they say, will be down at least one-third, but larger size peaches are in store for the buyer.

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Eisenhower boom has started again at the Democratic convention with one change. Now they'll take Milton Eisenhower.

But by nominating time, the field will be reduced to any 10 men in the hall.

Dixie Democrats are planning a later convention to ratify the articles of war.

They do not like the candidate, the platform or the local corn pone.

But California finally came around to Truman. Word that a Florida senator would run did it.

SOMEWHERE BETWEEN 100 and 400 Democratic delegate votes are claimed by backers of Florida's Sen. Claude Pepper in his announced "finish fight" to beat President Truman for the nomination for president at Philadelphia. Convention eve word of Pepper's availability resulted in "Eisenhower for President" signs being replaced with signs reading, "People's Choice for President, Claude Pepper," at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel. Eisenhower had been Pepper's choice.

Storm Severs News, Phone Feeder Cables

A high tension wire damaged by the storm fell across a phone cable between the cities and way points and burned it through in three places. The damage occurred at the South Parsons avenue viaduct in Columbus.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co., whose cables provide The Circleville Herald with state, national and world connections from International News Service, worked frantically to resume service.

The Herald's teletype service, which normally operates from 4 a. m. to 3 p. m., was dead. The teletype machine produced nothing (Continued on Page Two)

Armchair Engineers Say GE Plant To Be Finished By Early Winter

The huge new $2.5 million General Electric plant in the south end of Circleville is gradually becoming sheathed in brick, with the north side bricklaying nearing completion and work crawling around the east side.

The brickwork is being done on the front factory section of the building, while workmen are readying the rear warehouse section for more construction.

Relative size of the new structure was given Tuesday when a bulldozer was used inside the building to clear the ground for a cement floor, while in another section a large crane was excavating for ventilating tunnels and sewer ways.

All this activity was taking place in the front section, which is entirely covered with the roof.

The office building in front of the plant proper is also taking form, with nearly all the structural steel framework set and cement flooring in place.

Work on the roof over the front section of the plant also was nearing completion.

Members of the Steinle-Wolfe Construction Co. are non-committal as to when the building will be ready for G-E equipment.

Armchair engineers, who have seen the steadily advancing structure furrow their brows and, after much deep thought, come up with a prediction the day should fall sometime in early winter.

Officials at the site say merely that "construction is coming along fine."

UN Mediator Tells Story To Council

LAKE SUCCESS, July 13—Stern action was demanded today by UN Mediator Count Folke Bernadotte when he appeared before the Security Council to report on the Palestine situation.

The mediator told council members to order—not ask—an immediate cease-fire ban on both Jews and Arabs backed by land, sea and air power and to level economic sanctions on the first to break the order.

Meanwhile, Israeli army forces scored a new major victory today by capturing the Arab stronghold of Ras EL Ain while their capital of Tel Aviv was battered in one of the most severe aerial assaults of the Palestine war.

Ras EL Ain, 10 miles northeast of Tel Aviv, an important railway junction and source of Jerusalem's water supply, fell to Jewish troops in a frenzied assault early today.

Iraqi troops who had been holding Ras EL Ain set fire to vital water pump installations before they retreated. Israeli forces pursued the Arab units in the direction of the Ephraim hills.

Shooting Craps On Sidewalk To Get Jury's Eye

Next session of Pickaway County grand jury will be asked to decide whether it is legal to shoot craps on the streets of Williamsport.

At preliminary hearing Monday night in Magistrate Oscar Root's court, George Kain Jr., of Williamsport was bound to grand jury and freed under $500 bond following his arrest for allegedly gambling on the city's pavements.

The affidavit for Kain's arrest, which was filed by S. Blaine Ater, Williamsport marshal, said Kain was guilty of shooting dice on a city pavement at 10:30 p. m. Kain pleaded innocent to the charge.

Watch Is Kept For Missing Man

COLUMBUS, July 13—A guard stood on duty today at the Columbus disposal plant, watching for the body of Garland Sudderth about 55, who fell into a large sewer yesterday afternoon and was carried to his death.

Sudderth, an employee of a firm of consulting engineers, was measuring the depth of flow in the sewer when he apparently lost his balance. Jack Brandt, working with Sudderth, called police when his companion failed to emerge from the hole.

AMERICAN PROSPERITY would be menaced and "hopes of peoples everywhere would be blasted" by a Republican victory in November, Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, keynote at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia, tells the 1,234 delegates assembled in steaming Convention Hall for the second session of the 1948 convention. Barkley, 70, a rugged old gentleman in a white suit and black and white sports shoes, is one of the favorites for the vice-presidential nomination.

NO BARN ODORS WANTED

Board Bans All Livestock From County's Coliseum

By the narrow vote margin of eight to five, the Pickaway County Fair Board Monday night drew an iron curtain against the showing of cattle, hogs, sheep and horses in Fairgrounds Coliseum.

This move was in sharp contrast to the original planning of the Coliseum. The building is laid out with one side featuring a rough cement floor where livestock could be shown or quartered during a sale or demonstration.

The majority of the board members, claiming that the Coliseum one day would be permeated with barn odors, thus has ruled out such exhibitions as last Winter's Polled Hereford show which brought into the county some of the finest beef cattle in the state and paraded them before buyers and curious alike in the wide expanse of the Coliseum.

It had been the hope of Fair Board leaders to bring in other similar events from organizations which now are compelled to hold their shows in unsatisfactory quarters in Columbus.

ALREADY inquiries have been received from other cattle, horse and hog groups for shows in Circleville. They have labeled the local Coliseum as ideal and are not too particular about the tariff asked here. Already the Polled Hereford group is seeking (Continued on Page Two)

The Fair Board Monday night approved the idea of staging a county music festival on Friday night, Sept. 17, virtually an open date on the schedule for outside events. The festival would be held on a platform fronting the racetrack grandstand.

Theory back of the music festival idea is that it will promote more county participation in the Fair program.

Demos Sure Of Fireworks With Mrs. Edwards There

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—Don't look now, but things are picking up in this neighborhood.

Adrenalin has been administered, the tempo is suddenly allegro, and this Democratic clambake is beginning to approximate the Republican picnic—not in optimism, to be sure, but at least in the volume of words, sweat and cheers.

And judging from the rumbling in the corridors where gentlemen from Dixie speak in dulcet tones but carry big shellelaphs, there will be pyrotechnics of World's Fair proportions in Convention Hall before this meeting is adjourned.

Personalities jumping into focus are helping considerably to jazz up the scene. Handsome Helen Gahagan Douglas, with her emotional approach to politics is one enlivening factor; there are also Jimmy Roosevelt with his irium smile, Frances Perkins with her trademark tricorne, and Film Star Edward Arnold who looks more like a politician than any of the politicians.

Those who were around when the Democrats met in the happy days of 1944 recall that during a demonstration for Henry Wallace, Mrs. Douglas became so enraptured that she unconsciously popped the lighted end of a cigarette into her mouth.

The Southern rebels are dividing their anti-Truman strength between Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, and Sen. Richard Russell, of Georgia. They face certain defeat in the convention but their purpose is to raise their civil rights issue to November campaign stature.

The rebels are dividing between Laney and Russell according to their desires to walk out on Truman and to organize a fourth party of their own to contest the Republicans, Democrats and Henry Wallace's third party in November.

The Dixie strollers from this convention will hold one of their own in Birmingham, Ala., next Saturday. The Birmingham sessions threaten to end in organization of a new fourth party primarily in the South but ready at all times to branch out across the nation.

The rebel states are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky (despite Barkley), Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas. Virginia reportedly is on the fence.

The Louisiana and North Carolina delegations are loyal to Truman though opposed to his civil rights program.

THE RUSSELL adherents throughout the South will remain in the convention so they can participate in the vice-presidential nomination. Some of them may later attend the fourth party conference.

One important phase of the Dixie rebellion is that the Southern states can cast their electoral votes against President Truman. Alabama and Georgia already have told their electors to vote against Mr. Truman.

Besides Laney and Russell, Sen. Claude Pepper, of Florida, remains in the race against Truman. Pepper will get 6-1/2 votes from Florida and not much from any other state.

Laney will be the big-shot against Truman. Texas endorsed him and tossed 50 delegates in his camp. He can expect about 140 delegates in all, though his manager claims about 200.

The Texas endorsement of Laney, however, was for "as long as his candidacy is in the framework of the Democratic Party."

Laney himself announced he would bolt Truman. He told the Texans that "the Democratic Party is on the ropes and you will find a lot of whistling in the graveyard."

Texas State Senator Rogers Kelley said the whole South would vote against President Truman in the November election. He declared the Laney bolt means:

"We not only are going to have a third party but also a fourth party. This will guarantee the election of Thomas E. Dewey as President of the United States."

Veteran Tutors Accepted For County Posts

Mrs. Dorothy Collins of Carpenter, who has taught 19 years, has been offered a position teaching in the first and second grades at Duvall school.

Mrs. Collins, who received her training at Ohio university, replaces Mrs. Walter Harris, who resigned after two years to enter the Ashville system.

The other teacher hired was Mrs. Ada W. Smith of Lithopolis, who is to teach the first and second grades at Madison Township school. Mrs. Smith received training at Ohio university, and has taught elementary grade subjects for 12 years.

She is to occupy the position formerly held by Mrs. Elizabeth Swaney, who resigned to teach at Jackson Township.

could pay $1,000 or $1,500 for outside entertainment, but that the spending of a similar amount on local talent would reap far greater benefits.

Board officials quoted George McDowell, Pickaway County superintendent of schools as saying the "only trouble with the idea is that the event may be too popular to handle."

Principal idea would be to feature contests between school choir choruses, glee clubs, quartets, solos, duets, church choirs, and other vocal groups.

INDUCTIONS UNDER NEW DRAFT law begin soon after Sept. 22, and here are Army and Air Force centers where draftees will be sent. Six Army posts and 19 air bases will be reactivated to handle the vast peacetime training program in conjunction with centers already active. Army expects to take about 30,000 of the 19-25 age group each month. (International) session shortly before dawn broke over Philadelphia. Some Northern members said they anticipated there would be no discussion at the convention, but a Southerner heatedly stated: "We won't take this lying down."

Other planks approved by the sub-group called for:

1. "Full recognition" of the state of Israel by the United States and modification of the arms embargo in favor of the Jewish nation.

2. A 75-cent minimum wage for workers employed in interstate commerce in place of the present 40-cent hourly level.

3. Opposition to a federal sales tax and condemnation of the Republican Congress for asserting putting the tax burden on lower-income groups through its recent $4 billion tax cut.

4. Federal aid to the states for education.

5. Continuation of agriculture farm parity prices, with some consideration for changing economic conditions.

6. Continued support of the European Recovery Program.

7. Admission to the United States of 400,000 displaced persons from Europe instead of the 205,000 approved by Congress and without racial or religious discrimination.

8. Continued support of the Western Democracies and non-Communist nations and the good neighbor policy with Latin America.

his worshippers consider him superior to the Dalai Lama in religious rank.

Next to the two great Lamas is the regent, who is an ecclesiastic appointed during the minority of each Dalai Lama. Under him four ministers of state handle the secular affairs of the country.

LAMAISM—a corrupt form of Buddhism—is, of course, the religion of Tibet. In 622, the year in which Mohammed fled to Mecca, Buddhism was introduced into Tibet by King Srong Tsau Gampo, but it was not long before the ethical and metaphysical ideas of this doctrine were subjected to a considerable reformation.

Lamaism is the union of these new ideas (which also are accepted in a great measure into other sections of Asia) with a hierarchical system, and with the temporal sovereignty of the head of that system in Tibet.

The two great Lamas are looked upon as incarnations of Avalokitesvara and of Amitabha, saints who were attendant on the Buddha.

When either of them dies it is necessary for the other to ascertain in whose body the celestial being whose outward form has dissolved has incarnated himself. Thus the names of all male children born just after the death of one of the Great Lamas are given to his survivor.

After placing all the names into a golden casket which was provided for the purpose by a former Chinese emperor, the surviving Lama draws three.

THEN THE abbots of the great monasteries assemble and after a week of prayer draw one name. The child whose name is drawn becomes the Great Lama while the other two receive 500 pieces of silver.

If the stars are right and the present Dalai Lama is indeed assassinated despite the ban on foreigners this ritual will be conducted by the Tashi Lama.

C. E. Hutchison, 126 Park street, commander of the Circleville post of Disabled American Veterans, and Ernest Crites, Stoutsville, a delegate, will represent this area at a joint conference Sunday of state DAV's in Logan.

The session of the ninth and 10th districts will be held in the courthouse and will feature a service officers' school and a roundtable discussion led by Albert L. Croy, state commander of the DAV.

The Women's Auxiliary also will hold a conference during the morning. Mrs. Mae Milnes of Youngstown, state commander of the women's auxiliary will be present with other state and national officers.

Chapters from 18 Ohio cities will be represented in the conference at which time individual claim questions also will receive expert attention.

Accounts Filed For 4 Estates In Court Here

First and final accounting on three estates and second and final accounting on a fourth estate have been filed for approval in Pickaway County probate court.

Accounting on the Sam Jones estate was entered in court by Bertha Jones, executrix, showing charges and credits equal at $3,019.92.

Frances M. Noggle filed accounts on the estates of Grace F. Whaley and William H. Whaley. As administratrix for the first account, she disclosed credits and disbursements were equal at $1,307.39.

For the latter account, she was executrix and her records revealed charges and credits tallied at $2,249.28.

A second and final accounting was filed on the Margaret A. Dunlap estate by S. Arthur Dunlap and Louise Cromley, co-executrices. Records tallied at $1,514.66.

Council's Move Ending Threat

COLUMBUS, July 13—The last tattered shreds of a threat of a mass resignation in the Columbus police and fire departments disappeared today as the city council approved pay increases.

The council voted last night to increase salaried employees $25 per month and day laborers 13 cents an hour, effective Friday. However, those who have had pay boosts since August, 1947, will not be affected by the new increase.

Reuters reported that Arab irregulars who last night entered the Katamon and Me'or Haim suburbs of Jerusalem now have withdrawn.

Tel Aviv suffered widespread damage in what may prove to be the heaviest aerial attack yet loosed against the city.

Initial information on the assault said that casualties are high and damage great.

Destruction was most severe in one area where eight bombs exploded.

The damaging onslaught from the sky came at 11:20 a. m. after Tel Aviv had undergone two earlier light raids.

Israeli ships off shore opened up their guns against the attacking planes along with the regular anti-aircraft batteries in the city.

Israel army forces launched a drive meanwhile against Arab units northeast of Tel Aviv in an apparent thrust to restore normal water supply to Jerusalem.

Jewish infantry, backed up by artillery and aircraft, moved up on Ras El Ain and captured the village of Majdal Yaba, only three miles from the Arab stronghold.

BUT WHEN Mrs. Edwards stood there flapping a big piece of raw red beefsteak right in the faces of the cameramen and the television lenses and the great American public—when she clutched that slice of cow and shook it in the air and slapped it down on the rostrum and picked it up again and whirled it around her head—brother, that was the topper.

She pulled out milk bottles and cartons of butter and finally a real live child to illustrate her thesis.

Her subject—high prices—was a serious one. But she proved for once and for all that no woman can wave a raw steak in the face of the multitude without evoking hilarity.

She stole the play away from white-clad Senator Barkley, who preceded her, and black-clad, pearl-bedecked Frances Perkins who followed her. In a way, she was like a good omen for the Democrats.

the city into Soviet-occupied Eastern Germany.

Expectations are that the Russians will issue new passes permitting only a selected few commercial vehicles to journey from the Soviet sector of Berlin into the eastern zone.

The latest move in the Soviet economic blockade is seen as a step to prevent any possibility of travel from the western sectors, through the Russian sector and on to the east.

The United States went ahead meanwhile to circumvent the continued economic blockade of the western sectors through stepped-up aerial deliveries.

Planes seem to be developing to put the aerial lifeline of the Western Allies on an extended all-weather basis so that vital supplies can be carried into Berlin indefinitely if there is no end to the Soviet land blockade.

The U. S. Air Force is laying a new 5,000-foot steel matting runway at Tempelhof which is expected to double the field's capacity. The runway will be ready in six weeks.

IT IS LONG enough to take Superfortress bombing planes but an Air Force spokesman said that steel matting is not suitable for use by heavy Superfortresses.

The chairman of the German Social Democratic Party in Berlin warned meanwhile that should the Western Powers bow to Soviet pressure and leave Berlin, the lives of thousands of anti-Communists will be endangered.

The party chairman is Franz Neumann, who said:

"Western Allied evacuation would mean swift and merciless revenge by the Soviets and their Communist hirelings."

The Southern rebels are dividing their anti-Truman strength between Gov. Ben Laney, of Arkansas, and Sen. Richard Russell, of Georgia. They face certain defeat in the convention but their purpose is to raise their civil rights issue to November campaign stature.

The rebels are dividing between Laney and Russell according to their desires to walk out on Truman and to organize a fourth party of their own to contest the Republicans, Democrats and Henry Wallace's third party in November.

The Dixie strollers from this convention will hold one of their own in Birmingham, Ala., next Saturday. The Birmingham sessions threaten to end in organization of a new fourth party primarily in the South but ready at all times to branch out across the nation.

The rebel states are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky (despite Barkley), Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas. Virginia reportedly is on the fence.

The Louisiana and North Carolina delegations are loyal to Truman though opposed to his civil rights program.

THE RUSSELL adherents throughout the South will remain in the convention so they can participate in the vice-presidential nomination. Some of them may later attend the fourth party conference.

One important phase of the Dixie rebellion is that the Southern states can cast their electoral votes against President Truman. Alabama and Georgia already have told their electors to vote against Mr. Truman.

Besides Laney and Russell, Sen. Claude Pepper, of Florida, remains in the race against Truman. Pepper will get 6-1/2 votes from Florida and not much from any other state.

Laney will be the big shot against Truman. Texas endorsed him and tossed 50 delegates in his camp. He can expect about 140 delegates in all, though his manager claims about 200.

The Texas endorsement of Laney, however, was for "as long as his candidacy is in the framework of the Democratic Party."

Laney himself announced he would bolt Truman. He told the Texans that "the Democratic Party is on the ropes and you will find a lot of whistling in the graveyard."

Texas State Senator Rogers Kelley said the whole South would vote against President Truman in the November election. He declared the Laney bolt means:

"We not only are going to have a third party but also a fourth party. This will guarantee the election of Thomas E. Dewey as President of the United States."

Veteran Tutors Accepted For County Posts

Two veteran elementary grade teachers have been offered contracts in the Pickaway County school system.

Mrs. Dorothy Collins of Carpenter, who has taught 19 years, has been offered a position teaching the first and second grades at Duvall school.

Mrs. Collins, who received her training at Ohio university, replaces Mrs. Walter Harris, who resigned after two years to enter the Ashville system.

The other teacher hired was Mrs. Ada W. Smith of Lithopolis, who is to teach the first and second grades at Madison Township school. Mrs. Smith received training at Ohio university, and has taught elementary grade subjects for 12 years.

She is to occupy the position formerly held by Mrs. Elizabeth Swaney, who resigned to teach at Jackson Township.

PART OF HOT SCRAMBLE

Bandwagon Influence Cited In '48 Politics

WASHINGTON, July 13—With the Democratic national convention underway in Philadelphia, now seems as good a time as any to point out that the bandwagon influence is having just about its hottest year in the American political scramble.

On the Republican side of the political fence, the effects of the bandwagon influence popped up again and again, and often with exactly opposite results. Take the Stassen case, for instance.

As the year started, few of the experts gave the man from Minnesota much of a chance. After all, he had broken practically all the old campaign traditions by announcing his presidential aspirations a couple of years in advance, and then stumping the country—and parts of the world—in a personal effort to make them hear him.

Also, it was pretty generally conceded that Stassen was not too popular with the big wheels within the party and that certainly was bound to work against him when the ballots were in at nominating time.

All in all, Stassen was just about counted out even before the election year got well underway. But that was before his bandwagon got rolling.

ALONG CAME a couple of primaries, and Stassen led the pack—much to the amazement and embarrassment of many a political prophet. Public opinion polls (which this year seem to have a curious habit of following the news, rather than preceding it) suddenly showed Stassen's popularity growing by leaps and bounds.

And all the prophets, as if to stone for their previous error, immediately began to emphasize the importance of the Minnesota candidate.

Then, just as suddenly, a couple of developments yanked the rug out from under Stassen, and the air was full of leaping bodies as people deserted his bandwagon in droves.

That is only one example of what happened on the Republican side. There were many others almost as dramatic.

Most dramatic of the Democratic bandwagon developments of course, has been the Eisenhower boom—despite the fact that it was overshadowed by the general's unwillingness to run from the beginning. But it had not been the only one, by any manner of means.

President Truman, has been on both ends of the bandwagon business this year—that is to say, he has both suffered from it and he has profited from it. Either may happen to him again.

NATURALLY, Truman's popular fortunes did not fare so well during the Eisenhower boom. By the same token, when the so-called Southern revolt was in full cry a few months ago, millions of formerly fairly solid Democrats fell over one another jumping on the anti-Truman bandwagon.

Now, once again, there seems to be a terrific stampede to see who can predict the biggest defeat for Truman in the Fall—and who can say most often that the Democratic Party will collapse after the election, and never be revived.

Once again, the boys are climbing on a bandwagon.

Ohio Farmers Hike Mortgage Debt 2.9 Pct.

COLUMBUS, July 13—Ohio farmers are keeping their financial feet closer to the ground than farmers in other states in the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank district.

Ohio State university rural economists reported today that the Ohio farm mortgage debt increased only 2.9 percent in 1947. At the same time, Kentucky's mortgage farm debt jumped 4.7 percent; Illinois, 8 percent, and West Virginia 6.8 percent.

The OSU economists declared that periods of high farm income are used by "wise farmers" to cut down their debt load, to make improvements on their farm, and to take other measures to strengthen their financial position.

The total Ohio farm mortgage debt on Jan. 1 was $167,000,000. Figures released by the federal reserve bank show that commercial banks hold 39.5 percent of the total; life insurance companies, 11.3 percent; the Federal Land Bank, 10.9 percent; the Farm and Home Administration, 2.4 percent, and all other agencies, 36 percent.

ECA Sets Up Plan To Handle Money Problem

WASHINGTON, July 13—European recovery moved a notch closer to realization today as the Economic Cooperation Administration made its first attempt to solve currency problems in the Marshall Plan countries.

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman stepped into Europe's complicated financial picture with a plan to guarantee American investors the opportunity of converting foreign money into American dollars.

Hoffman established a $290 million currency convertibility fund which, officials said, would go a long way toward increasing the flow of investment capital into Europe.

Until now, an American investing in Europe spent American dollars and received in return the peculiar currency of the area in which he invested.

The catch came in converting the money back to American dollars. The Marshall Plan countries did not have enough American money to cash in their own currency. The result was that the American investor usually found himself with foreign money worth far less than U. S. dollars.

This, in turn, cut off a potential supply of precious American dollars and retarded industrial development of the particular European nations.

Ohio Farmers Hike Mortgage Debt 2.9 Pct.

COLUMBUS, July 13—Ohio farmers are keeping their financial feet closer to the ground than farmers in other states in the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank district.

Ohio State university rural economists reported today that the Ohio farm mortgage debt increased only 2.9 percent in 1947. At the same time, Kentucky's mortgaged farm debt jumped 4.7 percent; Illinois, 8 percent, and West Virginia 6.8 percent.

The OSU economists declared that periods of high farm income are used by "wise farmers" to cut down their debt load, to make improvements on their farm, and to take other measures to strengthen their financial position.

The total Ohio farm mortgage debt on Jan. 1 was $167,000,000. Figures released by the federal reserve bank show that commercial banks hold 39.5 percent of the total; life insurance companies, 11.3 percent; the Federal Land Bank, 10.9 percent; the Farm and Home Administration, 2.4 percent, and all other agencies, 36 percent.

CLEANING UP THE COMICS

ABOUT 50 million comic books are sold in this country every month. Publishers of 15 million of them have announced a six-point code of minimum editorial standards. An advertising code is expected later.

The editorial code is in essence a list of six types of subject matter or presentation considered objectionable. Signers of the code pledge themselves to avoid these.

This is fine. The negative side needs attention. But the positive side of writing and drawing for the young also needs emphasis. And only the young in mind are fascinated by comic books in their present state. They hold no allure for the mentally mature. Reading them is a sign of childishness whether in years or mental development.

"These two, light and darkness, are the world's eternal ways" says a line of old Hindu scripture. Conflict is the essence of interest for old and young both. But in the conquest of darkness by light, of evil by good, of weakness by mental, moral or physical strength, of Fate by the Will of Man are themes enough for all the comic books in the world. Good drawing with accent on beauty of line and design is also worthwhile. There is no excuse for the ugliness with which so many comic books are filled.

The publishers of the 15 million have started well. Let the others come in, and let them emphasize the good in life. There is plenty of it.

CERTIFIED SECRETARY

HAVE you a CP in your office? The letters stand for "certified professional secretary," a distinction not yet awarded but in the air. The National Secretaries Association, whose president is Miss Irene Gadelman of Tulsa, Okla., is trying to get such a grade created. Their model is the CPA, or certified public accountant, a title which every accountant would like to attain.

The idea is to distinguish between the ordinary stenographer and the true secretary, who goes far beyond a mere knowledge of stenography and typing and is really an office manager, often with personnel direction thrown in.

The proposal probably will be indorsed by every harried boss whose secretary is ill. He is likely to admit frankly that he may make a few useful contacts, but that the real work about the office is performed by the all-knowing miss who opens his mail, corrects the grammar of his letters, and remembers his wife's birthday.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

Political bosses are inevitable in our society. When the direct primaries were introduced in many states, it was hoped that they would destroy the power of the boss; actually this reform accomplished very little. The bosses continue to manipulate the people's vote, in many places offering candidates who are a disgrace to the electorate but for whom there is no alternative on the ticket.

The principal opposition to Harry Truman comes from the bosses who fear that he cannot defeat Tom Dewey. The business of the boss is to win an election. Ed Flynn, in one of the best textbooks on American politics, "You're the Boss," not only emphasizes this fact but blames the existence and the power of the boss on the political laziness and ineptitude of the people.

The bosses therefore would prefer a candidate other than Truman, not because they favor Eisenhower or Douglas but because they are more concerned with electing local candidates who might be swamped by a tidal wave. They do not want district attorneys who, in many places, represent the true power of the boss, defeated. They would also like to have a voice in the selection of federal district attorneys who, as in New Jersey, can be of great service to the Boss.

When Frank Hague of New Jersey announced his support of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, he did not represent any principle in the Democratic Party; his concern was for his dying organization. He has had 16 years of good times; he wants a fighting chance at having four more years of it. The indorsement is an insult to Eisenhower.

The certainty of the bosses that Truman cannot be elected has nothing to do with Dewey. They know that the New Deal amalgam, which James Roosevelt and Leon Henderson are trying to restore, has fallen into splinters. It is impossible to reconstitute the New Deal without the use of the Communist apparatus, as the late Sidney Hillman well understood. It is ridiculous to assume that the Communists would switch from Wallace to Eisenhower, but it is not outside possibility to assume that they would switch from Wallace to Douglas. For the Wallace campaign is not what it was at the start and the liberals and their allies hate to be left out in the cold.

Therefore, the bosses want a candidate who can make a deal with the so-called Liberals, the Leftwingers, the Communists, and all the fringe groups who would like to continue to play a part in the political life of the country without, on the part of the Communists, offending Stalin, and on the part of the non-Communist Leftwingers, being absorbed by the Right. Douglas's article in the Reader's Digest may impair his chances with Stalin, although the Commies want Truman out at any cost. The bosses are in the business of garnering votes so that they remain in power. They supplement their income by being able to make satisfactory and helpful arrangements for clients.

It will be tough on the bosses and their clients either way now: if Dewey is elected, he will sure get the naughty boys; should Truman be elected, he will seek revenge. They would prefer anybody else now.

'Round The Virginias - - - Hour by Hour

Pages From The Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

North out of Williamsburg to Yorktown fourteen miles away and there viewing the scene of the Revolutionary War climax. Here was enacted the last great act in the drama of American independence.

Cornwallis was defeated here by Washington and Lafayette, forcing the British to abandon their efforts to reduce the revolting American colonies to their old allegiance. Yorktown marks the consummation of our national independence. Other battles of the Revolutionary War led up to this one battle, while battles of other wars since then were only struggles for our rights, or for the preservation of the government whose existence was decided on the field here. The embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard around the world in the Revolutionary War opening at Lexington. On the field at Yorktown on October 19, 1781 it was finally decided after six and one-half years of heroic struggle that the shot had not been fired in vain from that date our independence was secure.

Viewed the old trenches, the redoubts, the camp grounds of the armies, the trails over which the armies of the British and the allied French and Americans were supplied. Marveled at the courage of our ancestors in storming the redoubts so well protected by deep ditches, abatis, palisades, the fraises. Brave and strong men.

COVER ALL YOU CAN

DURING the early stages of the bidding, if you hold a good hand opposite a bidding partner, there are many possibilities which you cannot foresee as a rule. They may include both the best declaration for the deal and the height of it. In case the former, the best declaration, is not made clear by some bid of your partner, it is usually best for you to cover as many different possibilities as you can. One guide to it is to prefer bidding a major yourself, if you can soundly, after he has opened with a minor. That still leaves a chance to reach No Trump if it is the best contract, whereas showing your strength by means of a No Trump call may result in your pair never hearing about a possible splendid major suit fit.

This deal, in these dispatches several weeks ago, elicited the query from a good player in Oakland, California: "Why isn't it correct to support North's 1-Club, after East's 1-Heart, with a jump 2-No Trumps bid instead of 1-Spade? South's three honor count and the fact that North bid on South's weakest suit, plus the heart strength, makes it seem that South's first response would be ideal if he said 2-No Trumps."

As it develops, North has a hand for dummy which makes 3-No Trumps the best contract. But South didn't know that when his own first turn arrived. Suppose North had held something like four spades headed by 10-9, two little hearts, the diamond A-Q and five clubs headed by the A-Q. In that event 2-No Trumps by South would have brought 3-No Trumps from North, a contract which might be defeated, whereas 4-Spades would be easy to make. With that hand, after 1-Spade by South over the 1-Heart, North would raise and South should play into game or else bid 3-No Trumps, which North should take into 4-Spades.

The reason why 1-Spade is a better first response than 2-No Trumps is that it covers more possibilities and leaves the door open to reach whichever contract is the better.

Feel Tired All the Time? Have a Physical Checkup

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MANY people these days seem to be constitutionally tired. They go to bed tired, wake up tired, and drag through the day under a great burden of fatigue. Since they have no marked symptoms of disease, they are often told by some friend that nothing is wrong with them and yet a really thoroughgoing physical examination would probably disclose half a dozen reasons for their habitual lack of energy.

The body reacts to so many different situations by fatigue, that if the source of the trouble is to be found, virtually every organ must come in for its share of scrutiny. Such an examination may be well worth while, even though it is troublesome for both doctor and patient, because it so often discloses the presence of unsuspected diseases in their beginning stages when they are most readily curable.

Eye Examination
The physician who has a tired patient to deal with will perhaps examine the eyes first. If the pupils do not contract when they are exposed to light, it may indicate some nervous system disease, such as syphilis.

A discharge from the nose, with paleness of the lining membrane, may indicate allergy or sensitivity. Missing teeth may suggest some nutritional deficiency or lack of vitamins or, perhaps, indigestion. Infected teeth may be a cause of tiredness because their poisons may be taken up by the blood and spread throughout the body.

Sores on the tongue and lip may indicate deficiency of vitamin B, or a lack of iron.

An enlargement of the thyroid gland in the neck may indicate a thyroid deficiency, which is a frequent cause of tiredness. On the other hand, the whipping up of all bodily processes, which results from an over-active thyroid may also result in fatigue.

The patient's blood pressure should be taken. If it is too low, it may be a symptom of what is called Addison's disease, in which there is lack of secretion from the adrenal glands located above the kidneys.

A test known as the sedimentation test may be carried out. This test is done by determining how fast the red cells settle out of the blood. An increased sedimentation rate may indicate some hidden infection and a careful search to discover exactly what it is, is then in order.

Tiredness may be a symptom of undulant fever, an infection due to germs which may be contracted from unpasteurized milk. A test, known as the agglutination test, is helpful in detecting this disorder. The test is carried out by seeing if the patient's blood serum will cause clumping of the undulant fever germs.

Blood Count
Of course, counting the red cells and determining the amount of coloring in the blood are important signs since anemia may cause tiredness.

Chest X-rays and an examination of the heart will help determine whether or not disorders of these organs are responsible for the difficulty.

Fatigue may also be due to emotional strain, to the change of life, and to similar disturbances. People who sleep poorly and take sedative drugs may, in a short time, become very tired from the drug itself. For this reason, these drugs should never be taken except when prescribed by a physician.

Tiredness is a symptom which demands careful investigation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. R.: Is there any cure for colitis?

Answer: There are many types of colitis, resulting from various causes. Some cases are due to infection; others are due to the wrong use of laxatives and improper diet. A permanent cure can be brought about in most types of colitis by means of proper treatment.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT
MR. DUFFEE, it developed, was an old friend. Andrew felt indignantly pleased that Mr. Woodford had chosen him to come along with them, and listened to their talk and reminiscence in respectful silence, with only an occasional interpolation. Mr. Duffee was thinking of building a house, but it had not yet got beyond the thinking stage. Still, Andrew was sure that after tonight he would have a very good chance at the designing of that house, particularly when Mr. Woodford described his alterations on the Wheeler place in glowing terms.

"Of course," he added, "young Paulson here has some very handsome pieces of furniture, and a fine sense of decoration, so the interior was most attractive looking. But I'm very much inclined to discount these things, Duffee, and I can tell you the house itself was a good job. . . . Well, enough of houses. Have you closed your office for good now?" he asked his friend.

"Yes, and I don't know whether I'm glad or sorry. It gave me a pang. I can tell you, to walk out of there for the last time, and say good-bye to all the staff. . . . I'd had too much work these last five or six years, and I can stand a little rest, I think. Still, I felt mighty queer. . . . The word must have passed around, because even a string of our tankers, going past toward the dry-docks to be repaired and refitted for peacetime service, gave me a salute."

Andrew was interested. "De-armed," he murmured. "I suppose they were fitted with pill-boxes and anti-aircraft guns."

"And concrete around the deck-houses—those ships took some awful strafing on the trip to Russia," Duffee explained. "And then, of course, they all had skid-decks to be removed, and they have to be re-painted."

"Skid-decks," Andrew said the word thoughtfully, some memory tugging at his brain. He had seen some of those tankers fitted for the carrying of fighter planes and other rush cargo. "That's the deck they built on top, isn't it?" he asked.

"What do you mean, on top?" Mr. Woodford demanded.

Mr. Duffee explained. "It was a long flat deck built about nine feet above the regular deck of the tanker, so that it looked a little like an airplane carrier. A tanker, you know, has the deckhouse aft, and then a long stretch to the bow, uninterrupted by anything larger than the expansion trunks, and pipes, and so forth."

Andrew suddenly sat forward in his chair. "Those skid-decks must have been built of pretty heavy lumber," he said, trying to keep the excitement out of his voice.

"Sure. Three by eights or so. Some of them larger."

"And they'd be beautifully seasoned planks by now." "After four years of weather? I should say so!" Duffee looked at him with sudden new respect. "Say, I see what you're getting at! I could use some of that stuff for the house I'm thinking of building!"

Andrew sat back, letting out his breath a little to hide his disappointment. "No, I wasn't getting at that at all," he admitted slowly. "I was thinking of some houses I'm trying to build. . . . Do you think there'd be any chance of my getting some of that stuff?"

"I don't think so," he said. "You see, the dry-dock is paid by the government to re-fit the tanker and whatever is salvaged and sold (that is, whatever doesn't belong to the government) is credited to the shipowner. In this case, the oil company, you see."

"But what would they do with the lumber?" Andrew pressed this point.

"Nothing. In the first place, it will probably be ripped off in such a way that it's ruined, anyhow. To save time, you know." Andrew pursued the idea in his mind. "No. . . . If the right man were approached."

"By you," by someone in authority," Duffee corrected him with a twinkle. "I think it could be arranged that the lumber would be carefully removed and saved. . . . I'll look into it when I go back to Boston Monday."

Andrew had to be content with that, but his mind was already racing. If he could get hold of some lumber like that, he would have well-seasoned timbers for the studing and joists of his projected house. For more than one, perhaps. If it didn't cost too much to have it handled carefully and freighted up here.

When he went downstairs again, Joan was nowhere in sight. Her mother was comfortably ensconced in a corner with a friend, and he hesitated to interrupt her. Before he could make up his mind to do so, a slender hand touched him on the arm. Mary Roland smiled at him brilliantly. "Well," she said, "you weren't really thinking of settling down with two old ladies, were you? Not with me around?"

She did not give him a chance to reply, but steered him toward the sun-parlor which had been cleared for dancing. Two couples were lazily moving about to the music from a mammoth radio-phonograph at one side. One of them, he saw, was Carol and a strange young man who had thick wavy blond hair and a permanent sneer. Carol waved to him.

"Who's the world-weary individual?" Andrew asked Mary as his arm encircled her waist and they started off across the floor.

"That's Ralph. His people have just come up."

Ralph. . . . The name struck a familiar chord. For a moment Andrew searched his memory, then he had it. "Young Estabrook?" he asked.

"Of course. I'd forgotten you wouldn't know. You seem so—so established here," Mary said with a smile, "that it's hard to think of you as a comparative stranger."

Andrew thought privately, after another glance at the young, discontented face, that one consolation for having sold the Wheeler place was that he wouldn't have Ralph Estabrook for a neighbor. Even though it was only in the summers, and the Estabrooks were quite some distance away. "I see Carol has already met him."

"Oh, yes, I gather she's been haunting the boundary line ever since she heard he had come up," Mary said with surprising acerbity. Andrew looked down at her, wondering if she herself was smitten with the almost Grecian profile of young Ralph. "You've known him long?"

"Ever since he was in knee pants," she said. "They used to come up here summers and rent a small place. Then, when Mr. Estabrook made all his money, they built their present house." She added, with a note of admiration, "He's a perfect devil. Always was, too."

Andrew could well imagine it. The more he stared at young Estabrook, the less he liked him. This surprised him, because his was essentially a friendly nature. It couldn't be attributed to jealousy, either, he thought, analyzing his own emotions with an inward smile, for he could not imagine being jealous of any man's attentions to Carol—the little spitfire. If it had been Joan, now. . . .

He made up his mind to look up Joan as soon as this dance was over. As if she sensed his withdrawal, Mary was quieter. Besides, her bright eyes were always following the progress of Ralph and Carol. Andrew offered to get Mary some punch, but she laughed at him. "You don't have to practice your drawing-room manners up here," she told him. "I know you want to get away. . . . Joan's in the dining room—or was, when last seen," she added with a knowing twinkle.

Andrew headed for the dining room. Yes, Joan was still there, standing beside the punch-bowl, and talking animatedly with one of the three young men who had first greeted her. Andrew did not realize just how belligerent his thoughts had made him look when he strode up to her. "They're dancing in the sun parlor," he said, with somewhat of an air of command. "May I have the pleasure?"

Joan looked up, startled. "Pleasure for whom?" she asked, laughing. "I dance so seldom—" But she went with him.

CLEANING UP THE COMICS

ABOUT 50 million comic books are sold in this country every month. Publishers of 15 million of them have announced a six-point code of minimum editorial standards. An advertising code is expected later.

The editorial code is in essence a list of six types of subject matter or presentation considered objectionable. Signers of the code pledge themselves to avoid these.

This is fine. The negative side needs attention. But the positive side of writing and drawing for the young also needs emphasis. And only the young in mind are fascinated by comic books in their present state. They hold no allure for the mentally mature. Reading them is a sign of childishness whether in years or mental development.

"These two, light and darkness, are the world's eternal ways" says a line of old Hindu scripture. Conflict is the essence of interest for old and young both. But in the conquest of darkness by light, of evil by good, of weakness by mental, moral or physical strength, of Fate by the Will of Man are themes enough for all the comic books in the world. Good drawing with accent on beauty of line and design is also worthwhile. There is no excuse for the ugliness with which so many comic books are filled.

The publishers of the 15 million have started well. Let the others come in, and let them emphasize the good in life. There is plenty of it.

CERTIFIED SECRETARY

HAVE you a CP in your office? The letters stand for "certified professional secretary", a distinction not yet awarded but in the air. The National Secretaries Association, whose president is Miss Irene Gadelman of Tulsa, Okla., is trying to get such a grade created. Their model is the CPA, or certified public accountant, a title which every accountant would like to attain.

The idea is to distinguish between the ordinary stenographer and the true secretary, who goes far beyond a mere knowledge of stenography and typing and is really an office manager, often with personnel direction thrown in.

The proposal probably will be indorsed by every harried boss whose secretary is ill. He is likely to admit frankly that he may make a few useful contacts, but that the real work about the office is performed by the all-knowing miss who opens his mail, corrects the grammar of his letters, and remembers his wife's birthday.

On the field at Yorktown on October 19, 1781 was finally decided after six and one-half years of heroic struggle that the shot had not been fired in vain. From that date our independence was secure.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

Political bosses are inevitable in our society. When the direct primaries were introduced in many states, it was hoped that they would destroy the power of the boss; actually this reform accomplished very little. The bosses continue to manipulate the people's vote, in many places offering candidates who are a disgrace to the electorate but for whom there is no alternative on the ticket.

The principal opposition to Harry Truman comes from the bosses who fear that he cannot defeat Tom Dewey. The business of the boss is to win an election. Ed Flynn, in one of the best text books on American politics, "You're the Boss," not only emphasizes this fact but blames the existence and the power of the boss on the political laziness and ineptitude of the people.

The bosses therefore would prefer a candidate other than Truman, not because they favor Eisenhower or Douglas but because they are more concerned with electing local candidates who might be swamped by a tidal wave. They do not want district attorneys who, in many places, represent the true power of the boss, defeated. They would also like to have a voice in the selection of federal district attorneys who, as in New Jersey, can be of great service to the Boss.

When Frank Hague of New Jersey announced his support of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, he did not represent any principle in the Democratic Party; his concern was for his dying organization. He has had 16 years of good times; he wants a fighting chance at having four more years of it. The indorsement is an insult to Eisenhower.

The certainty of the bosses that Truman cannot be elected has nothing to do with Dewey. They know that the New Deal amalgam, which James Roosevelt and Leon Henderson are trying to restore, has fallen into splinters. It is impossible to reconstitute the New Deal without the use of the Communist apparatus, as the late Sidney Hillman well understood. It is ridiculous to assume that the Communists would switch from Wallace to Eisenhower, but it is not outside possibility to assume that they would switch from Wallace to Douglas. For the Wallace campaign is not what it was at the start and the liberals and their allies hate to be left out in the cold.

Therefore, the bosses want a candidate who can make a deal with the so-called Liberals, the Leftwingers, the Communists, and all the fringe groups who would like to continue to play a part in the political life of the country with out, on the part of the Communists, offending Stalin, and on the part of the non-Communist Leftwingers, being absorbed by the Right. Douglas's article in the Reader's Digest may impair his chances with Stalin, although the Commies want Truman out at any cost. The bosses are in the business of garnering votes so that they remain in power. They supplement their income by being able to make satisfactory and helpful arrangements for clients.

It will be tough on the bosses and their clients either way now: if Dewey is elected, he will sure get the naughty boys; should Truman be elected, he will seek revenge. They would prefer anybody else now.

Such an examination may be well worth while, even though it is troublesome for both doctor and patient, because it so often discloses the presence of unsuspected diseases in their beginning stages when they are most readily curable.

Eye Examination
The physician who has a tired patient to deal with will perhaps examine the eyes first. If the pupils do not contract when they are exposed to light, it may indicate some nervous system disease, such as syphilis.

A discharge from the nose, with paleness of the lining membrane, may indicate allergy or sensitivity. Missing teeth may suggest some nutritional deficiency or lack of vitamins or, perhaps, indigestion. Infected teeth may be a cause of tiredness because their poisons may be taken up by the blood and spread throughout the body.

Sores on the tongue and lip may indicate deficiency of vitamin B, or a lack of iron.

An enlargement of the thyroid gland in the neck may indicate a thyroid deficiency, which is a frequent cause of tiredness. On the other hand, the whipping up of all bodily processes, which results from an over-active thyroid may also result in fatigue.

The patient's blood pressure should be taken. If it is too low, it may be a symptom of what is called Addison's disease, in which there is lack of secretion from the adrenal glands located above the kidneys.

A test known as the sedimentation test may be carried out. This test is done by determining how fast the red cells settle out of the blood. An increased sedimentation rate may indicate some hidden infection and a careful search to discover exactly what it is, is then in order.

Tiredness may be a symptom of undulant fever, an infection due to germs which may be contracted from unpasteurized milk. A test, known as the agglutination test, is helpful in detecting this disorder. The test is carried out by seeing if the patient's blood serum will cause clumping of the undulant fever germs.

Blood Count
Of course, counting the red cells and determining the amount of coloring in the blood are important signs since anemia may cause tiredness.

Chest X-rays and an examination of the heart will help determine whether or not disorders of these organs are responsible for the difficulty.

Fatigue may also be due to emotional strain, to the change of life, and to similar disturbances. People who sleep poorly and take sedative drugs may, in a short time, become very tired from the drug itself. For this reason, these drugs should never be taken except when prescribed by a physician.

Tiredness is a symptom which demands careful investigation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. R.: Is there any cure for colitis?

Answer: There are many types of colitis, resulting from various causes. Some cases are due to infection; others are due to the wrong use of laxatives and improper diet. A permanent cure can be brought about in most types of colitis by means of proper treatment.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

MR. DUFFEE, it developed, was an old friend. Andrew felt indelibly pleased that Mr. Woodford had chosen him to come along with them, and listened to their talk and reminiscence in respectful silence, with only an occasional interpolation.

Mr. Duffee was thinking of building a house, but it had not yet got beyond the thinking stage. Still, Andrew was sure that after tonight he would have a very good chance at the designing of that house, particularly when Mr. Woodford described his alterations on the Wheeler place in glowing terms.

"Of course," he added, "young Paulson here has some very handsome pieces of furniture, and a fine sense of decoration, so the interior was most attractive looking. But I'm very much inclined to discount these things, Duffee, and I can tell you the house itself was a good job. . . . Well, enough of houses. Have you closed your office for good now?" he asked him.

"Yes, and I don't know whether I'm glad or sorry. It gave me a pang. I can tell you, to walk out of there for the last time, and say good-bye to all the staff. But I've had too much work these last five or six years, and I can stand a little rest, I think. Still, I felt mighty queer. . . . The word must have passed around, because even a string of our tankers, going past toward the dry-docks to be repaired and refinished for peacetime service, gave me a salute."

Andrew was interested. "De-armed," he murmured. "I suppose they were fitted with pill-boxes and anti-aircraft guns."

"And concrete around the deck-houses—those ships took some awful strafing on the trip to Russia," Duffee explained. "And then, of course, they all had skid-decks to be removed, and they have to be re-armed."

"Skid-decks?" Andrew said the word thoughtfully, so the memory tugging at his brain. He had seen some of those tankers fitted for the carrying of fighter planes and other rush cargo. "That's the deck they built on top, isn't it?" he asked.

"What do you mean, on top?" Mr. Woodford demanded.

Mr. Duffee explained. "It was a long flat deck built about nine feet above the regular deck of the tanker, so that it looked a little like an airplane carrier. A tanker, you know, has the deckhouse aft, and then a long stretch to the bow, uninterrupted by anything larger than the expansion trunks, and pipes, and so forth."

Andrew suddenly sat forward in his chair. "Those skid-decks must have been built of pretty heavy lumber," he said, trying to keep the excitement out of his voice.

"Sure. Three by eights or so. Some of them larger."

"And they'd be beautifully seasoned planks by now."

"After four years of weather? I should say so!" Duffee looked at him with sudden new respect. "Say, I see what you're getting at! I could use some of that stuff for the house I'm thinking of building!"

Andrew sat back, letting out his breath a little to hide his disappointment. "No, I wasn't getting at that at all," he admitted slowly. "I was thinking of some houses I'm trying to build. . . . Do you think there'd be any chance of my getting some of that stuff?"

Duffee puffed on his pipe a moment. "I don't think so," he said. "You see, the dry-dock is paid by the government to re-fit the tanker and whatever is salvaged and sold (that is, whatever doesn't belong to the government) is credited to the shipowner. In this case, the oil company, you see."

"But what would they do with the lumber?" Andrew pressed this point.

"Nothing. In the first place, it will probably be ripped off in such a way that it's ruined, anyhow. To save time, you know."

"But it needn't be," Andrew pursued the idea in his mind.

"No. . . . If the right man were approached—"

"By you."

"... by someone in authority," Duffee corrected him with a twinkle. "I think it could be arranged that the lumber would be carefully removed and saved. . . . I'll look into it when I go back to Boston Monday."

Andrew had to be content with that, but his mind was already racing. If he could get hold of some lumber like that, he would have well-seasoned timbers for the studding and joists of his projected house. For more than one, perhaps. If it didn't cost too much to have it handled carefully and freighted up here.

When he went downstairs again, Joan was nowhere in sight. Her mother was comfortably ensconced in a corner with a friend, and he hesitated to interrupt her. Before he could make up his mind to do so, a slender hand touched him on the arm. Mary Roland smiled at him brightly. "Well," she said, "you weren't really thinking of setting down with two old ladies, were you? Not with me around!"

She did not give him a chance to reply, but steered him toward the sun-parlor which had been cleared for dancing. Two couples were laughing and moving about the music from a mammoth radio-phonograph at one side. One of them, he saw, was Carol and a strange young man who had thick wavy blond hair and a permanent sneer. Carol waved to him.

"Who's the wide-weary individual?" Andrew asked Mary as his arm encircled her waist and they started off across the floor.

"That's Ralph. His people have just come up."

"That's Ralph. His people have just come up."

"That's Ralph. His people have just come up."

"That's Ralph. His people have just come up."

"That's Ralph. His people have just come up."

Ralph. . . . The name struck a familiar chord. For a moment Andrew searched his memory, then he had it. "Young Estabrook?" he asked.

"Of course. I'd forgotten you wouldn't know. You seem so—so established here," Mary said with a smile. "That's hard to think of you as a comparative stranger."

Andrew thought privately, after another glance at the young, discontented face, that one consolation for having sold the Wheeler place was that he wouldn't have Ralph Estabrook for a neighbor. Even though it was only in the summers, and the Estabrooks were quite some distance away. "I see Carol has already met him."

"Oh, yes, I gather she's been haunting the boundary line ever since she heard he had come up," Mary said with surprising acuity.

Andrew looked down at her, wondering if she herself was smitten with the almost Grecian profile of young Ralph. "You've known him long?"

She added, with a note of admiration, "He's a perfect devil. Always was, too."

Andrew could well imagine it. The more he stared at young Estabrook, the less he liked him. This surprised him, because his was essentially a friendly nature. It couldn't be attributed to jealousy, either, he thought, analyzing his own emotions with an inward smile, for he could not imagine being jealous of any man's attentions to Carol—the little spitfire. If it had been Joan, now. . . .

He made up his mind to look up Joan as soon as this dance was over. As if she sensed his withdrawal, Mary was quieter. Besides, her bright eyes were always following the progress of Ralph and Carol. Andrew offered to get Mary some punch, but she laughed at him. "You don't have to, Alice your drawing-room manners up here," she told him. "I know you want to get away. . . . Joan's in the dining room—or was, when last seen," she added with a knowing twinkle.

Andrew headed for the dining room. Yes, Joan was still there, standing beside the punch-bowl, and talking animatedly with one of the three young men who had first greeted her. Andrew did not realize just how belligerent his thoughts had made him look when he strode up to her. "They're dancing in the sun parlor," he said, with somewhat of an air of command. "May I have the pleasure?"

Joan looked up, startled. "Pleasure for whom?" she asked, laughing. "

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

Beware of Bean Blight

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Distributed by Central Press Association

Blight and the Mexican beetle are apt to make life miserable for beans in the Freedom garden.

Bean blight is a bacterial disease, easily spread, which causes irregular shaped blotches on the leaves, and slightly raised watery pustules on the pods, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

To guard against the Mexican beetle, watch the undersides of bean leaves during July. At the first sign of the beetles or their larvae (bright orange colored eggs) dust the undersides of the leaves thoroughly with rotenone dust or spray with a rotenone compound.

Bean blight is carried in the seed; therefore, the first plants which show any of the illustrated symptoms should be pulled and burned at once.

Horticulture experts are experimenting in the hope of producing new varieties of beans which will be disease free. Until these are available, home gardeners should take the following precautions:

Plant only the more disease-resistant types of beans.

Never work among beans when they are wet with rain or dew so as not to spread infection from one plant to another.

Do not cultivate under wet conditions, nor pick beans when they are wet.

Avoid even walking through the rows of beans when they are wet.

Another good safety measure is not to grow beans in the same soil the second year. Rotate the crop and you will have better beans.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Beware of Bean Blight

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Distributed by Central Press Association

Blight and the Mexican bean beetle are apt to make life miserable for beans in the Freedom garden.

Bean blight is a bacterial disease, easily spread, which causes irregular shaped blotches on the leaves, and slightly raised watery pustules on the pods, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

To guard against the Mexican beetle, watch the undersides of bean leaves during July. At the first sign of the beetles or their larvae (bright orange colored eggs) dust the undersides of the leaves thoroughly with rotenone dust or spray with a rotenone compound.

Bean blight is carried in the seed; therefore, the first plants which show any of the illustrated symptoms should be pulled and burned at once.

Horticulture experts are experimenting in the hope of producing new varieties of beans which will be disease free. Until these are available, home gardeners should take the following precautions:

Plant only the more disease-resistant types of beans.

Never work among beans when they are wet with rain or dew so as not to spread infection from one plant to another.

Do not cultivate under wet conditions, nor pick beans when they are wet.

Avoid even walking through the rows of beans when they are wet.

Another good safety measure is not to grow beans in the same soil the second year. Rotate the crop and you will have better beans.

Ted Lewis Park Selected For August Meeting

Ted Lewis park was selected for the site of the August meeting of Von Bora Society of Trinity Lutheran church. The outdoor meeting will be highlighted by a picnic supper with members of the executive committee being selected to direct the arrangements.

The plans were made during a meeting Monday evening when the society met in the parish house with Mrs. Luther Bower, president, directing the session.

Mrs. Charles Walters read selections from the Scriptures and offered a prayer. The group sang "Saved By Grace."

Topic of the month, "Christian Women In Politics," was presented by Miss Florence Hoffman. The business session concluded as the members repeated the Lord's prayer.

Two piano solos were played by Miss Sue Brown. A lunch was served by the July hospitality committee headed by Mrs. Mary Beck.

Personals

Mrs. Grace Renick has returned to her home on North Scioto street after spending several weeks with her son, Job R. Renick and family in Newark, N. Y. While there Mrs. Renick attended commencement exercises of Newark high school when her granddaughter, Joan Renick, was one of the graduates.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wilson and daughter, Gloria Jane, have returned from a trip through the East including Williamsburg, Va., where they were guests at the Williamsburg Inn, one of the world's outstanding hostels.

Racing Crown To Be At Stake In Chillicothe

CHILLICOTHE, July 13—First place in the Central States Racing Association point standings will be at stake Sunday when the big cars go on the Ross County fairground track on Route 104 north of here.

Wally Stokes of Cleveland is in first place for CSRA big car drivers with 277 points. Only 27 points back is Jimmy Daywalt, the Wabash, Ind., speedster. By winning Sunday, Daywalt can pick up enough points to go ahead of Stokes.

Sunday's big car race program is sponsored by the Ross County Conservation League with the proceeds earmarked for conservation work locally. It will be the first time that the big cars have been permitted to run on the Ross county track.

Third in the national standing is Bobby Grim of Indianapolis, followed by George Tichenor of Logansport, Ind.; Bob O'Neill of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Carl Scarborough of Keego Harbor, Mich.

RED BALES of Columbus is seventh, while next in line are Cliff Griffith of Indianapolis, Billy McGee of Zanesville, Delo Loin Jordan of Barborton, Speedy Wynn of Tampa, Fla., Bobby McClain of Wierton, W. Va., Harry King of Tampa, Fla., and Vern Faler of Columbus.

All are entered in the local program Sunday.

Coliseum Tourney Fees Booked; Auto Races, Boxing Get Eye

Pickaway County Fair Board in a meeting Monday night considered three items of business of interest to sporting fans.

They included the proposition of approving motorcycle and midget auto races at the Fairgrounds, the setting of a fee schedule for basketball tournaments in the Coliseum, and giving approval to the sponsoring of wrestling and boxing shows in the Coliseum.

The board voted that future basketball tournaments in the Coliseum shall follow a fee schedule of $50 per night for any organization or school from Pickaway County.

Individual, non-tournament games will be charged $35 for schools from this county. Any school or organization from outside Pickaway County shall be charged $60 per night. In all cases, concession rights shall remain under the jurisdiction of the Fair Board.

Considerable discussion played around the idea of charging a flat fee plus a percentage of the gross take at the gate. This idea was abandoned when it appeared the majority of the board viewed the proposition with disfavor.

Whether motorcycle and midget automobile races will be held at the Fairgrounds in the future rests in the hands of the board's finance committee.

Local harness race enthusiasts have okayed the proposition with one provision: that motorcycle races would be staged only after the 1948 Fair and just before the racetrack is straved down for the winter.

One board member pooh-poohed this stand, declared it was "selfish when the harnessmen control the track the whole year and use it for only a few days."

Some board members opined that the motors would tear up the track, leave it permanently damaged.

Tom Harman, secretary of the board, was instructed to contact secretaries of other fairs and determine actual damage to their tracks and the amount of revenue realized by sponsoring such events.

His information will be turned over to the finance committee for final decision. That panel is made up of Leslie May, chairman, Forrest Short and James Yost.

Sideline observers noted that on the face of the personalities on the committee, the proposition was virtually doomed.

WRESTLING and boxing events in the Coliseum were approved after a representative of the Circleville Veterans of Foreign Wars approached the board on the idea.

The board, quick to snap up any revenue-producing attraction, unhesitatingly gave the green light to the idea.

Local Junior Olympic Chiefs Are Praised

Pickaway County promoters for entry of about 20 county youngsters in the National Junior Olympics were lauded Tuesday by a letter from William O'Neill, manager of the national event.

O'Neill's letter praised the Circleville promoters for backing the project, and stated Pickaway County's entry was the only one received from Central Ohio.

O'Neill declared that "we generally are hosts only to the larger metropolitan areas but we shall bend over backward to give your crew a big welcome."

The local heads are to meet in Charley Glitt's Court-Main restaurant at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday to discuss the local runoffs, which are to be held at the Pickaway County Fairgrounds August 4.

At the local runoffs, 20 Pickaway County youngsters who top competition in various events will be sent to the national meet on the Baldwin-Wallace college campus Aug. 27 and 28.

The lads who gain honors at the Fairgrounds meet will be sent at the expense of various business and service clubs in Circleville.

Park Program Adds Pair Of Baseball Teams

Two baseball teams were formed at Ted Lewis Park Summer supervised playground Monday afternoon. They are the Athletics, managed by Jerry Rooney, and the Yankees, piloted by Jerry Pritchard.

Jim Kirkpatrick, supervisor for the Kiwanis-sponsored program, said equipment such as catchers' gear and balls would be furnished by Kiwanis club.

Bill Beck and Ted Raymond copped the horseshoes doubles tourney at the park Monday, and Ted and Joe Mogan, a brother team, were the runners up.

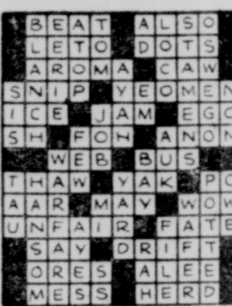

Other activities at the park included a hopscotch tourney, which was won by Eddie Tomlinson, with Roy Huffer as second place man.

TUESDAY'S activities at the park were to have included a Class AA softball game between the Roundtowners and Mud Hens, work on the giant checkerboard project, sidewalk tennis, a boxing class and mixed games.

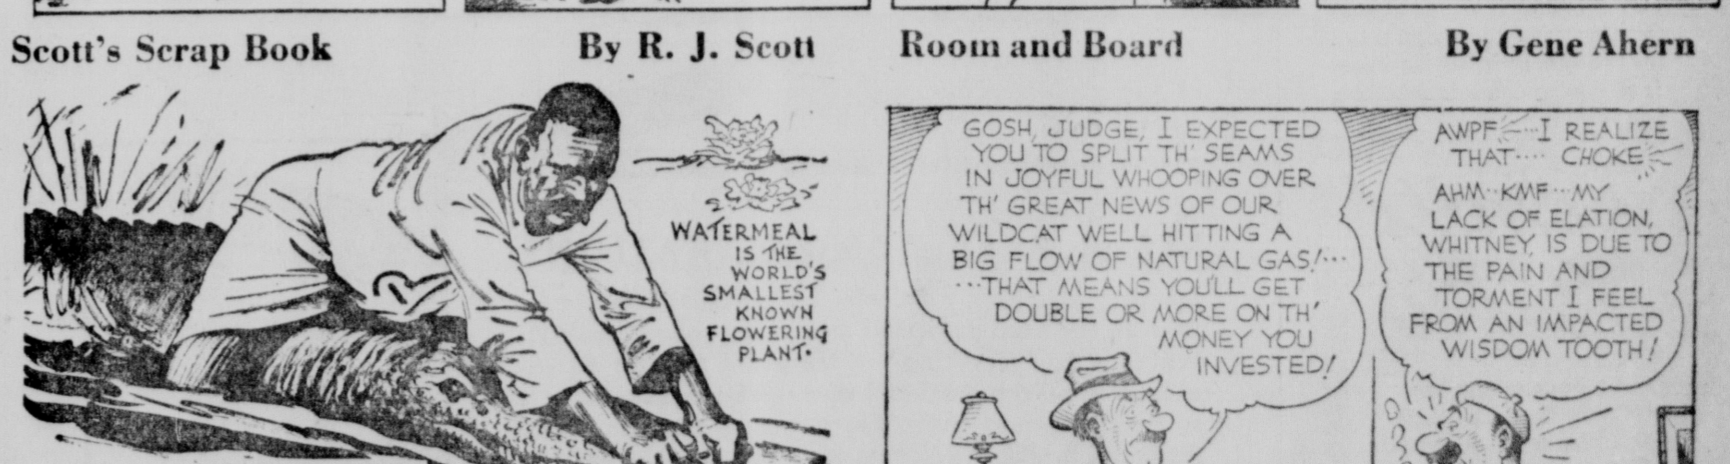

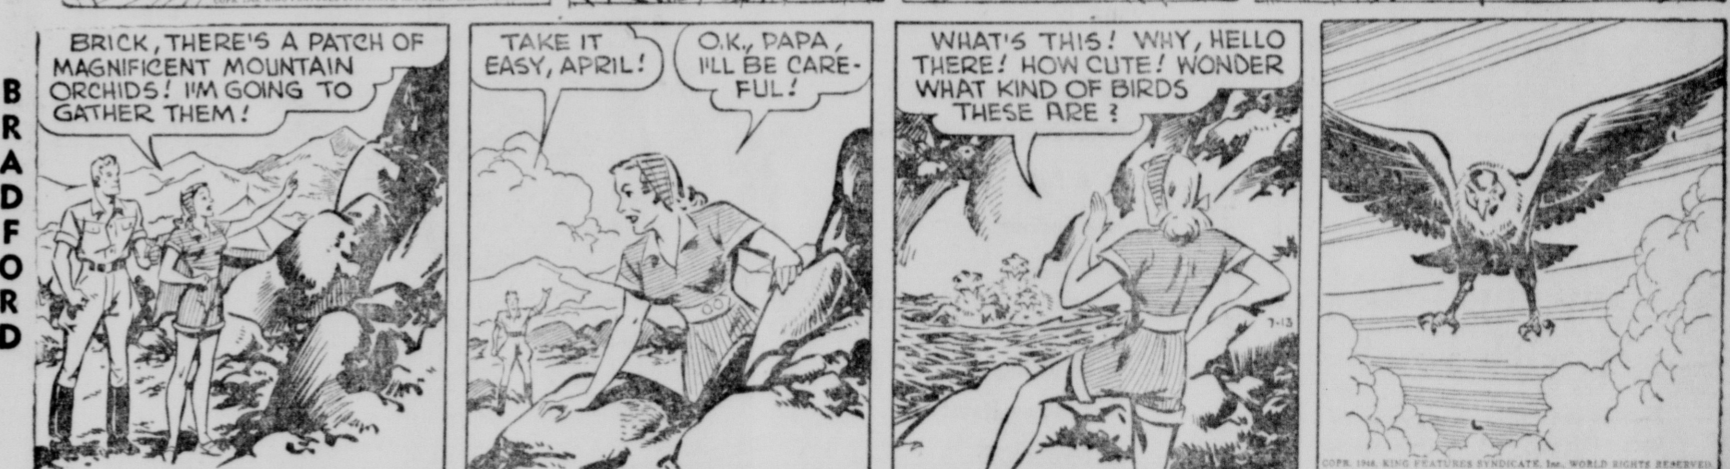

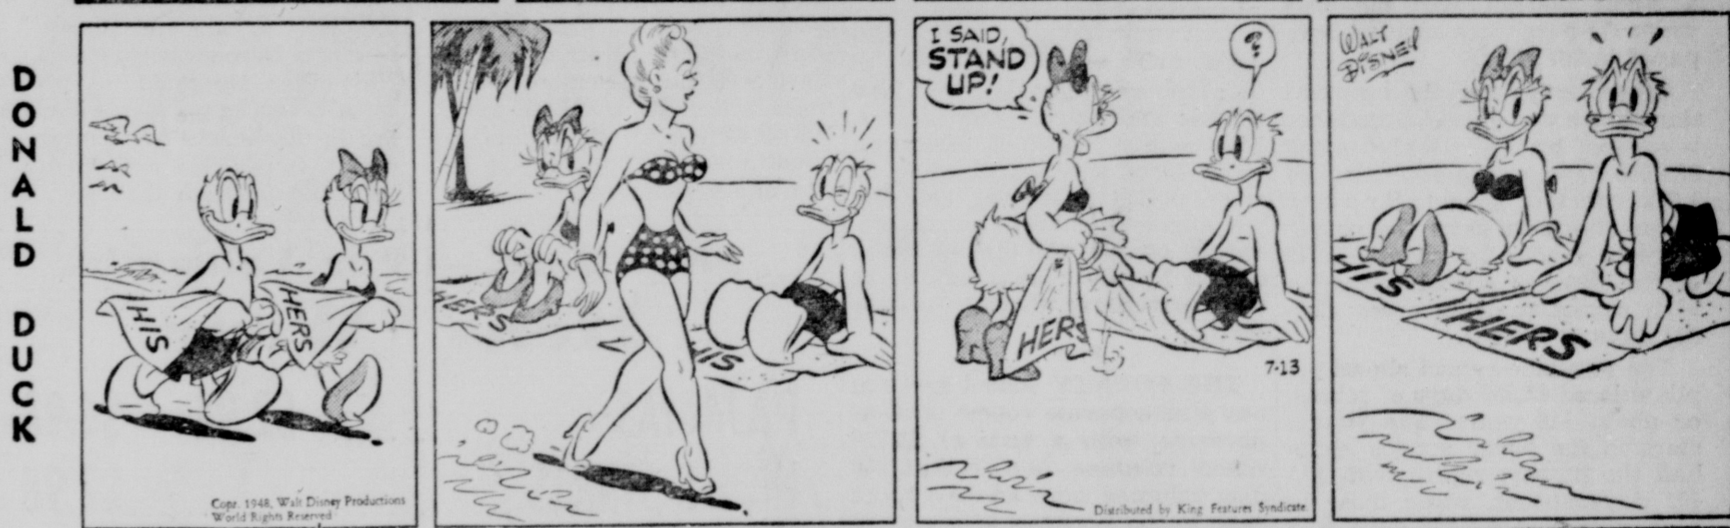

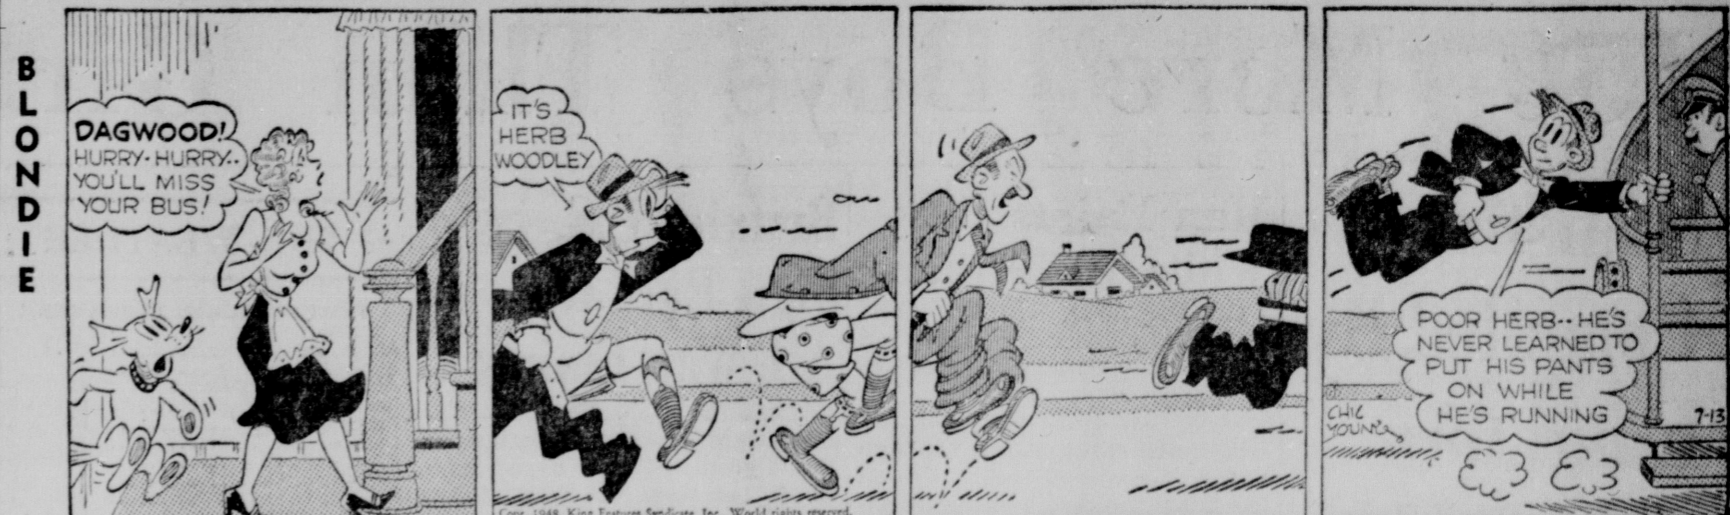

Wednesday the special feature at the park will be a "story hour" given by Mrs. Enid Denham of Circleville public library. Also on the Wednesday schedule are a jacks tourney, a girls' softball game between the Panthers and Yellow Jackets and group games.

AL '9' Favored To Top Nats In All-Star Tilt

ST. LOUIS, July 13—The injury-riddled American League All-Stars were favored to beat the Nationals today in the 15th renewal of baseball's All-Star game in Sportsman's Park here.

Two right-handed pitchers—

Brooklyn's Ralph Branca for the visiting senior circuit team and New York's Vic Raschi for the host Americans—were the likely choices to start on the mound.

About 35,000 fans were to be on hand to see how, if at all, a set of stand-ins could fill the shoes of the missing Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio, George Kell and Hal Newhouse.

This peerless American League foursome — Boston's Williams in left, New York's DiMaggio in center, Detroit's Kell at third and Newhouse, intended starting hurler—sat on the sidelines with injuries as the rival Nationals, humiliated in 10 of the 14 All-Star games so far, prepared to go to the plate.

THE ODDS were 13 to 20 if you liked the Americans. Before

Bucky Harris, the sad-faced American League manager, shuffled the four aces out of the deck yesterday, it was 11 to 20.

On the National League side of the field, the thoughtful Leo Durocher was performing a few cut-ups.

He retained the privilege of switching starting pitchers at the eleventh hour, expressing a liking for gaunt Ewell Blackwell as a "possible" behind his own Branca.

The Nationals' pilot had one health problem, too—that of Red Schoendienst of St. Louis at second.

Bill Rigney of New York was held in ready reserve to replace the Cardinal player whose throwing shoulder has been bad of late.

Only one rookie was in the lineup for the game—Richie Ashburn of the Philadelphia Phillies, who was leading off the National League batting order and patrolling the center-field area.

Truman Appears Sore As He Goes To Post

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—The favorite, Mr. Truman, looks a little sore going to the post.

After putting lead in his shoes, giving him a slow powder, and whispering to the jockey to fall off in the starting gate, Trainer Jimmy Roosevelt says he fully expects Mr. Truman to run the race of his life.

Nobody can say that Jimmy hasn't been helpful—to the Republicans.

There've been so many scratches in this race (Eisenhower, Douglas, et al.) you'd think Citation was running instead of Dewey.

It's a dark cloud that hasn't a silver lining somewhere. At least Hank Wallace's tall corn is missing.

At the last Democratic convention, Happy Chandler was running for vice-president and Bob Hannegan helped to elect one.

NOW CHANDLER is the high commissioner of baseball and Hannegan is president of the St. Louis Cardinals.

If organized baseball is going to be the old folks home for politicians without portfolio, it probably will have to expand considerably in the near future.

Still, there's always a spot for a good man. Who knows but that one of these days, Mr. Truman will buy the St. Louis Browns?

Coliseum Tourney Fees Booked; Auto Races, Boxing Get Eye

Pickaway County Fair Board in a meeting Monday night considered three items of business of interest to sporting fans.

They included the proposition of approving motorcycle and midget auto races at the Fairgrounds, the setting of a fee schedule for basketball tournaments in the Coliseum, and giving approval to the sponsoring of wrestling and boxing shows in the Coliseum.

The board voted that future basketball tournaments in the Coliseum shall follow a fee schedule of $50 per night for any organization or school from Pickaway County.

Individual, non-tournament games will be charged $35 for schools from this county.

Any school or organization from outside Pickaway County shall be charged $60 per night. In all cases, concession rights shall remain under the jurisdiction of the Fair Board.

Considerable discussion played around the idea of charging a flat fee plus a percentage of the gross take at the gate. This idea was abandoned when it appeared the majority of the board viewed the proposition with disfavor.

Whether motorcycle and midget automobile races will be held at the Fairgrounds in the future rests in the hands of the board's finance committee.

Local harness race enthusiasts have okayed the proposition with one provision: that motorcycle races would be staged only after the 1948 Fair and just before the racetrack is strawed down for the winter.

One board member pooh-poohed this stand, declared it was "selfish when the harnessmen control the track the whole year and use it for only a few days."

Some board members opined that the motors would tear up the track, leave it permanently damaged.

Tom Harman, secretary of the board, was instructed to contact secretaries of other fairs and determine actual damage to their tracks and the amount of revenue realized by sponsoring such events.

His information will be turned over to the finance committee for final decision. That panel is made up of Leslie May, chairman, Forrest Short and James Yost.

Sideline observers noted that on the face of the personalities on the committee, the proposition was virtually doomed.

WRESTLING and boxing events in the Coliseum were approved after a representative of the Circleville Veterans of Foreign Wars approached the board on the idea.

The board, quick to snap up any revenue-producing attraction, unhesitatingly gave the green light to the idea.

Local Junior Olympic Chiefs Are Praised

Pickaway County promoters for entry of about 20 county youngsters in the National Junior Olympics were lauded Tuesday by a letter from William O'Neill, manager of the national event.

O'Neill's letter praised the Circleville promoters for backing the project, and stated Pickaway County's entry was the only one received from Central Ohio.

O'Neill declared that "we generally are hosts only to the larger metropolitan areas but we shall bend over backward to give your crew a big welcome."

The local heads are to meet in Charley Gilt's Court-Main restaurant at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday to discuss the local runoffs, which are to be held at the Pickaway County Fairgrounds August 4.

At the local runoffs, 20 Pickaway County youngsters who top competition in various events will be sent to the national meet on the Baldwin-Wallace college campus Aug. 27 and 28.

The lads who gain honors at the Fairgrounds meet will be sent at the expense of various business and service clubs in Circleville.

Park Program Adds Pair Of Baseball Teams

Two baseball teams were formed at Ted Lewis Park Summer supervised playground Monday afternoon. They are the Athletics, managed by Jerry Rooney, and the Yankees, piloted by Jerry Pritchard.

Jim Kirkpatrick, supervisor for the Kiwanis-sponsored program, said equipment such as catchers' gear and balls would be furnished by Kiwanis club.

Bill Beck and Ted Raymond copped the horseshoes double's tourney at the park Monday, and Ted and Joe Mogan, a brother team, were the runners up.

Other activities at the park included a hopscotch tourney, which was won by Eddie Tomlinson, with Roy Huffer as second place man.

TUESDAY's activities at the park were to have included a Class AA softball game between the Roundtowners and Mud Hens, work on the giant checkerboard project, sidewalk tennis, a boxing class and mixed games.

Wednesday the special feature at the park will be a "story hour" given by Mrs. Enid Denham of Circleville public library. Also on the Wednesday schedule are a jacks tourney, a girls' softball game between the Panthers and Yellow Jackets and group games.

Wet Grounds Bring Delay In Softball Menu

The Isaly vs. Boyd softball game in the Circleville Night Softball League was postponed Monday night because of wet grounds. The game has been rescheduled for Wednesday as the first game of a twin bill, the other game between Tinks and Millions.

Tuesday night Mumaws are to play Boyers at Ted Lewis Park. The diamond was more than a little moist Tuesday morning, but James Callihan, league head, said it would dry in time for the tilt if there was no more rain.

The Monday rain may have put the "championship" Circleville Kids League game between the Spur Oilers and Wavers ahead another week. The youngsters have been rained out three weeks prior to the Tuesday possible postponement.

Thursday's exhibition games have not been carded, according to Callihan, but efforts are being made to fill the Friday bill game in part with two girls' teams from Columbus.

150 More Boys Than Girls In County School System

Statistics Compiled By Educators

42,369 Pupil-Days Lost During Year

There were 150 more boys than girls enrolled in Pickaway County schools during the 1947-48 school year.

According to an annual statistical report made by County Superintendent George D. McDowell, the noses of 1,920 boys were tallied during the past year, while only 1,770 girls were counted.

There were 1,440 boys enrolled in grades one through eight last year, while only 1,226 girls were registered. In high school grades nine through 12 the girls gained a slight margin over the boys when 475 boys were counted compared to 504 girls.

Other facts from the report show there was a total attendance registered by the 3,890 students of 589,990 days, or the equivalent of 1,619 years of school. Broken down, the facts show the youngsters in grades 1-8 spent 459,619 of the days in school while the high school students spent 130,371 days in classes.

The absentee report shows pupils missed 42,369 days of school, or about 116 years. The youngsters in the lower grades again had the highest figure with 33,491 days absent, while those in high were absent 8,878 days. The average daily membership figure was 3,617 for the year, 2,817 from the elementary grades and 800 from grades 9-12.

Exactly 27 separate buildings were used to educate the students, the buildings including the schools, garages, shops, janitors' home lunch rooms and gymnasiums.

The report shows there was an average of one teacher for every 22.9 pupils in the system, with a total of 161 instructors for the 3,690 students.

High school students received the most attention, according to the figures since 69 teachers taught 979 high schoolers (an average of one teacher for every 14.1 students) while 92 instructors taught the 2,711 children in grades 1-8 (an average of 22.9 students per teacher).

Of the 161 teachers, only 41 were men, with 21 of them

Man Paints City White In Mishap

CLEVELAND, July 13—Harold Stevenson, 26, painted Cleveland—or at least a part of it—white today.

Stevenson drove his paint and jelly-laden truck from Chicago and was about 100 yards from his goal, the Aztec lines terminal, when his truck was rammed by a speeding New York Central passenger train.

The train cut the trailer neatly in half and spilled the contents for 1,000 feet along the right of way. The load of white paint smeared the locomotive and most of the 13 cars it was hauling and formed half-inch pools along the ground.

Stevenson suffered bruised knees when he was hurled from the cab, while the only other damage resulted to passengers and train crewmen who milled about in the white goo before realizing that it was paint.

employed in the high schools.

Last year, 2,877 of the 3,640 students were taken to classes by the 72 buses operated by the schools and private contractors. The county board of education owns 48 of the buses, while 20 were privately owned and the remaining four were party privately owned. Of the 48 buses owned by the county board, 23 were purchased during the last year.

THE COUNTY school system has nine separate rooms used as libraries, with a total of 23,729 school volumes. More than 900 new volumes were added last year to the libraries at a cost of $1,571.11.

Of this year's graduating classes, the boys dominated the girls in the elementary school commencement exercises when 145 of the lads entered high school compared to 114 girls.

Girls retained the lead in high school graduation ceremonies with 99 as compared to 78 boy graduates.

Britain, U.S. Sign Pact On All War Claims

WASHINGTON, July 13—The State department has announced the signing of two agreements finally settling all war claims between the United States and Great Britain.

The signing took place this morning in the office of Secretary of State Marshall who signed for the United States. Sir Oliver Franks, the British ambassador, signed for Britain.

Earlier, tentative agreements had been signed covering the lend lease account, reciprocal aid, surplus property and value of lend lease transfers continued after V-J Day.

The first agreement signed today formalized the earlier agreement.

In the second agreement, arrangements were made with regard to the division of proceeds derived from the sale of war-time installations in the Middle East and the currency in which these proceeds would be paid.

Full details are to be published simultaneously Thursday in London and Washington.

Demos, Cleanse Your Hearts!

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—Former Sen. Samuel D. Jackson, Indiana's favorite son candidate for the vice-presidency, told the Hoosier delegation today it is a "sin and shame" to talk of a Democratic defeat in November. He said:

"A creeping paralysis is working in the hearts of Democrats today. It is a sin and shame to take the position that we can't

Fireman Cites Need For More Carefulness

Cincinnati Kiwanis Club Monday night heard Bob Wolf, city fireman, speak on safety as the dinner club observed "Farm Safety Week" in Pickaway Country Club.

Wolf, member of the Cincinnati fire department for 20 years, declared that it is "easier to be careless than to be careful" and as a result Americans are suffering more damage and injury from fires every year.

He chided the necessity which declares that "we shall set aside this one week to save the farmer. What of the other 51 weeks of the year?

Wolf declared that statistics show that on farms alone, there are 30 million accidents a year. Ohio industrial injury claims during 1947 alone numbered about 300,000, he said.
The local firemen declared that "85 to 90 percent of all fires are preventable. We know that we can prevent them by being careful in our homes. We can prevent them by being careful in our businesses. We can prevent them by being careful in our cars. We can prevent them by being careful in our cooking. We can prevent them by being careful in our smoking. We can prevent them by being careful in our drinking. We can prevent them by being careful in our everything."

2 Youths Die In Accidents

ATHENS, July 13—Athens County has recorded two violent deaths as a result of weekend accidents.

Edward Oliver McGlone, 17, was drowned in the Hocking river while wading near Coolville. He was unable to swim and stepped into water over his head.

Thirteen-year-old Correnia Lavella Sycks died of burns suffered Saturday when she poured oil on hot coals in a cooking stove. Contents of the home near Millfield were destroyed in the resulting blaze.

150 More Boys Than Girls In County School System

Statistics Compiled By Educators

12,369 Pupil-Days Lost During Year

There were 150 more boys than girls enrolled in Pickaway County's schools during the 1947-48 school year.

According to an annual statistical report made by County Superintendent George D. McDowell, the noses of 1,920 boys were tallied during the past year, while only 1,770 girls were counted.

There were 1,441 boys enrolled in grades one through eight last year, while only 1,226 girls were registered. In high school grades nine through 12 the girls gained a slight margin over the boys when 453 girls were counted compared to 404 boys.

Other facts from the report show there was a total attendance registered by the 3,690 students of 389,990 days, or the equivalent of 1,619 years of school. Broken down, the facts show the youngsters in grades 1-8 spent 459,619 of the days in school while the high school students spent 130,371 days in classes.

The absentee report shows pupils missed 42,369 days of school, or about 116 years. The youngsters in the lower grades again had the highest figure with 33,491 days absent, while those in high were absent 8,878 days. The average daily membership figure was 3,617 for the year, 2,817 from the elementary grades and 800 from grades 9-12.

Exactly 27 separate buildings were used to educate the students, the buildings including the schools, garages, shops, janitors' home, lunch rooms and gymnasiums.

The report shows there was an average of one teacher for every 22.9 pupils in the system, with a total of 161 instructors for the 3,690 students.

High school students received the most attention, according to the figures, since 69 teachers taught 979 high schoolers (an average of one teacher for every 14.1 students) while 92 instructors taught the 2,711 children in grades 1-8 (an average of 22.9 students per teacher).

Of the 161 teachers, only 41 were men, with 31 of them

Man Paints City White In Mishap

CLEVELAND, July 13—Harold Stevenson, 26, painted Cleveland—or at least a part of it—white today.

Stevenson drove his paint and jelly-laden truck from Chicago and was about 100 yards from his goal, the Aztec lines terminal, when his truck was rammed by a speeding New York Central passenger train.

The train cut the trailer neatly in half and spilled the contents for 1,000 feet along the right of way. The load of white paint smeared the locomotive and most of the 13 cars it was hauling and formed half-inch pools along the ground.

Stevenson suffered bruised knees when he was hurled from the cab, while the only other damage resulted to passengers and train crewmen who milled about in the white goo before realizing that it was paint.

employed in the high schools.

Last year, 2,877 of the 3,640 students were taken to classes by the 72 buses operated by the schools and private contractors. The county board of education owns 48 of the buses, while 20 were privately owned and the remaining four were party privately owned. Of the 48 buses owned by the county board, 23 were purchased during the last year.

THE COUNTY school system has nine separate rooms used as libraries, with a total of 23,729 school volumes. More than 900 new volumes were added last year to the libraries at a cost of $1,571.11.

Of this year's graduating classes, the boys dominated the girls in the elementary school commencement exercises when 145 of the lads entered high school compared to 114 girls.

Girls retained the lead in high school graduation ceremonies with 99 as compared to 78 boy graduates.

Britain, U.S. Sign Pact On All War Claims

WASHINGTON, July 13—The State department has announced the signing of two agreements finally settling all war claims between the United States and Great Britain.

The signing took place this morning in the office of Secretary of State Marshall who signed for the United States. Sir Oliver Franks, the British ambassador, signed for Britain.

Earlier, tentative agreements had been signed covering the lend lease account, reciprocal aid, surplus property and value of lend lease transfers continued after V-J Day.

The first agreement signed today formalized the earlier agreement.

In the second agreement, arrangements were made with regard to the division of proceeds derived from the sale of war-time installations in the Middle East and the currency in which these proceeds would be paid.

Full details are to be published simultaneously Thursday in London and Washington.

Demos, Cleanse Your Hearts!

PHILADELPHIA, July 13—Former Sen. Samuel D. Jackson, Indiana's favorite son candidate for the vice-presidency, told the Hoosier delegation today it is a "sin and shame" to talk of a Democratic defeat in November. He said:

"A creeping paralysis is working in the hearts of Democrats today. It is a sin and shame to take the position that we can't

Fireman Cites Need For More Carefulness

Circleville Kiwanis Club Monday night heard Bob Wolf, city fireman, speak on safety as the dinner club observed "Farm Safety Week" in Pickaway County Club.

Wolf, member of the Circleville fire department for 20 years, declared that it is "easier to be careless than to be careful" and as a result Americans "are suffering more damage and injury from fires every year."

He chided the necessity which declares that "we shall set aside this one week to save the farmer. What of the other win in November after the great record we've had in the last 16 years. Democrats, cleanse your hearts."

51 weeks of the year?

Wolf declared that statistics show that on farms alone, there are 30 million accidents a year. Ohio industrial injury claims during 1947 alone numbered about 300,000, he said.

The local firemen declared that "85 to 90 percent of all fires are preventable. We know that yet we insist on cutting pennies in fuse boxes, cleaning with gasoline and smoking in bed. This is all absolute carelessness, yet we call the result 'an accident.'"

He cautioned Kiwanians to "just stop doing one of these careless things and then watch the drop in the number of accidents."
